What Can A Professional Organizer Do For Me?

A Professional Organizer can help to bring a renewed sense of clarity, calm and control into your life by teaching you to organize your time, your space and your stuff so that you become more effective, efficient and productive. We provide ideas, information, structure, solutions and systems to help busy professionals become more organized in all areas of their life.

Is It Time to Contact a Professional Organizer?*

Disorganization can have a significant negative effect on your business and personal life. A recent survey determined that 53% of us believe we live in a state of “controlled chaos” and that 67% do not know how to begin the task of organizing our lives.

At home, many of us struggle with achieving balance and harmony in our life. We are overwhelmed and reactive instead of being empowered and proactive. This loss of control can lead to undue stress, anxiety and even depression. Becoming more organized can have a positive effect on our personal health and overall sense of well-being.

Other research shows that, on average, we spend almost six weeks per year searching for misplaced information. If you multiply those six weeks, times the number of people in your office, and then by the average weekly pay rate, you begin to get a sense of the enormous negative impact that disorganization has on a company’s bottom line.

If you believe that disorganization is having a negative impact on your life, it may be time to consider contacting a training professional organizer. A professional organizer can provide you with the knowledge, skills and systems you need to take back control of your life.

Who is Professional Organizer - Jane Veldhoven?

Jane is a seasoned organizer who has been helping busy professionals organize their lives for the past six years. She received her TPO (Trained Professional Organizer) designation through Professional Organizers in Canada (POC) in November 2007 and her CPO® (Certified Professional Organizer®) designation from the Board of Certification for Professional Organizers (BCPO) in January 2008. She continues to pursue further education and training in the field. She was the first member of POC in Atlantic Canada when she joined the association in 2002.

Jane is a consummate professional in all aspects but still has the uncanny knack for making organizing fun while accomplishing a lot in a short amount of time. Here is what one client said after a training session with Jane,

“I just wanted to send a note and thank you for the great class on Saturday. I was so motivated from the class that I really controlled myself at the afternoon auction . . . So by Sunday evening, our bedroom was organized, and I even got through most of the newspapers I had been saving up.”
